Walter Arnold was born in 1897 in a small town in Maine. His father was a farmer and his mother was a schoolteacher. Walter had a difficult childhood. His father died when he was young, and his mother remarried a man who was abusive. Walter left home at the age of 14 and began working as a trapper.

Walter was a natural trapper. He had a keen eye for detail and a deep understanding of the animals he hunted. He quickly became one of the most successful trappers in Maine.

In 1921, Walter Arnold married a woman named Sadie. The couple had two children, a son and a daughter. Walter and Sadie lived in a small cabin in the woods. They lived a simple life, but they were happy.

Walter continued to trap throughout his life. He trapped for fur, but he also trapped for food. He was a skilled hunter and fisherman. He knew how to live off the land.

In the 1950s, Walter Arnold began to share his stories with the world. He wrote a book called "The Maine Trapper" which became a bestseller. He also appeared on several television shows and documentaries.

Walter Arnold died in 1985 at the age of 87. He was a legendary figure in Maine history. He was a master of survival skills and a gifted storyteller. His legacy will continue to inspire generations to come.
